

A student asked yesterday, "Where and how do we begin to study for this test?" To address this question, key concepts will be identified but you will have to develop the questions and/or the discussion points. Additional information from lectures is available on the I-drive and it is highly encouraged that you incorporate that material into your study "reservoir". The more people that participate in your VISTA group, the higher the probability for the creation of questions similar to those on the test. Better still, you will learn the concepts to use as a foundation for advanced level classes and not just be memorizing them! Participation during this VISTA session will determine the group configurations for the next test review. Options are to leave the groups as they are, merge all groups into one, or place the "higher" users into their own groups since they are the ones doing the most active work.

To write a question or discussion point, just click on the REPLY box as if you were going to answer a question and start writing. When you are finished, click on the POST box.

Good luck and try to have some fun!
